May – June Topic

Pounding the Pavement

We've all been doing it but have you really had a good look at what you have seen along the way? When you take your camera with you, you will see more things and see them differently. Whether you're walking on concrete, gravel or through the bush, there will be a clearer visual definition and a more rewarding walk for you. So start using your camera or phone to document what you are seeing in your suburb or local reserve.

And don't forget to look down! When was the last time you photographed your feet? What are they standing on? There's also the quirky. I've seen some odd and quirky things in the last couple of months. You probably have too so this is the chance to show them off.

Tech specs: small files please, 500KB is plenty, in jpg format. We cannot keep your images secure from someone who might copy them and use them elsewhere. If that bothers you, you could place a watermark on them or select not to participate.

Credit/caption: Contributors should give their name as they want it shown; a caption for each photo and the topic.

Limited to: five photos per member so you may consider a series of photos on the same subject or have individual non-related photos.

Future topics: My backyard; Patterns; Self-portrait; Welcoming new growth
